

I stongly object to forcing me to buy a new TV. While I have broadband cable, I do not subscribe to cable TV. We examined our viewing habits and found that most of what we watched was available for free (local channels). Warner Cable's minimal TV subscription is $30 for analog only so even keeping minimal didn't make sense. I have 4 TVs that work just fine. Why should I be forced to go buy all new TVs just to suit you? Its one thing to add a new broadcast type, but you cannot sit in your ivory tower and dictate that my family must spend $1000 in TV purchases just because you say so. Our budget cannot afford it!

The FCC used to take this sort of thing into consideration. My how heavy-handed you've become. Rest assured I will be writing my elected officals to express my outrage at this intrusion.
